Parents are often overwhelmed by the problems presented by a child with developmental issues. In the process of seeking assistance, it can be a daunting task to know where to go or who to contact. As events unfold, new and different challenges constantly arise and we repeatedly find ourselves asking, "Now what?"

Join us for a discussion with a panel of experts to discover important information on better understanding disabilities, fielding through the special education process, finding and building your personal team of professionals, and learning about financial and legal options to help your child and yourself, both today and in the future.
